POSEIDON is an innovative multi-stakeholder project between local authorities, local integration structures and associations from various countries with the aim of organizing a youth exchange (EDJ) in the Souss Massa Drâa region. This project aims to bring together a dozen of youngsters from Hérault with five Moroccans, five Spaniards and five Italians around activities related to environmental care, outdoor sports, green tourism and socio-cultural activities in the rural area. The aim of this project is to consider the mobility of young people as an experience to strengthen their social inclusion and to encourage their immersion through the discovery of sustainable tourism activities (green tourism, sports and outdoor activities, heritage discover

GENERAL BACKGROUND :

In the Euro-Mediterranean region, some rural areas, especially those which are isolated and depopulate, are facing specific challenges particularly linked to employment, accessibility and growth. The young people from the rural areas have more difficulties to benefit from mobility opportunities and tools for employability or international mobility.

The department of Hérault has a specific network of actors in the field of youth called « Jeun'Hérault » gathering a wide range of institutional and associative partners. Concordia Sud-Est has been an active actor for many years within the network. Since 2013 the department of Hérault, through its various international partnerships especially with the Moroccan area of Souss-Massa-Drâa, have lead several youth projects on sustainable development -promotion of rural tourism, access to water, health and sport. Also since 2016 a permanent working group on youth, inclusion and mobility has been created within the « Jeun'Hérault » network and includes representatives from the « missions locales » (community aid for young people) which are interested to develop collective actions in order to foster mobility and employability for the young NEET.

In this context, Concordia Sud-Est together with their partners intends to set up a youth exchange tackling sustainable development, mobility, social inclusion and employability

OBJECTIVES OF THE PROJECT:

To foster active participation and international mobility of young people with less opportunities from rural areas

- To raise awareness on environmental issues and eco-citizenship
- To promote intercultural learning and exchange, active citizenship and social inclusion through sustainable development, nature and sport activities
- To identify training needs of young people in their career path
- To provide youth with new tools on environmental and sustainability careers and jobs (green tourism, sport and nature activities, natural and cultural heritage, socio-cultural and community work in rural areas)
- To enable young people to take ownership of new tools to enhance their skills through environmental and sustainable development
- To foster new synergies among different local and international organisations
